Here's to Humankindness

More than $1.4 million was raised during the Third Annual Humankindness Gala hosted by the Dignity Health Foundation last month at San Francisco City Hall, an event which drew marquee names including Bernard Tyson, Denise Bradley-Tyson, Tania Lee, Ron Conway and co-chairs Willie Brown and Janet Reilly, Brenda Wright and Steve Bowdry. Also spotted: Amir Mashkoori, Melissa and Clyde DyrdaHL, Clint Reilly and London Breed.

The event transformed City Hall into a wonderland keeping with the evening's theme of "Through the Kaleidoscope: Kindness Reimagined," with 8-foot tall letters reading "Hello, humankindness" greeting guests as they arrived. The star-studded celebration brought in much-needed funding to address major social issues and health disparities that Dignity Health sees every day, such as health equity, human trafficking, concussion education and postpartum depression.

This year's gala also recognized Everyday Hero award winner Sister Mary Ellen Leciejewski, an Adrian Dominican Sister and the vice president of corporate responsibility at Dignity Health. Leciejewski was honored for her contribution to programs that highlight awareness about sustainability and health care's impact on the environment.

"We believe that people who share the same community should all have access to the care and services that contribute to good health," says

Dignity Health President and CEO Lloyd Dean, who also runs the Dignity Health Foundation. "As we work toward ensuring that more people gain access to safe housing, clean air, healthy food, and affordable transportation, our hope is that the inequities that now exist in so many communities will diminish and everyone can have the opportunity to be healthy."
